Elmer Ritter Rusco

May 6, 1928 – July 2, 2004

When Elmer Rusco died in Virginia on July 2, 2004, at the age of 76, Nevada lost an astute observer of political and governmental affairs, a prominent champion of equal rights before the law, and a groundbreaking historian. The Nevada Historical Society lost a good friend and longtime supporter.

Elmer was born in Kansas in 1928 and grew up there, eventually attending the University of Kansas. It was while he was a university student that he first gained an awareness of institutionalized racism, became a political activist, and embarked upon a lifelong campaign against racial discrimination.

After earning his doctorate in political science at the University of California, Berkeley, he taught at several schools before coming to Reno and the University of Nevada in 1963. He was one of those responsible for organizing and shaping a new Department of Political Science, and during two decades of teaching in the department he published a number of articles and monographs on political subjects. Among these were "Voting Behavior in Nevada" (1966), "Voting Behavior in Arizona" (1967), "Minority Groups in Nevada" (1966), and "Voices of Black Nevada" (1971). When the American Civil Liberties Union of Nevada was created, Elmer was one of its founders and he later served as its president.

By the mid-1970s, Elmer was increasingly looking at the historical aspects of subjects that interested him, prominently the status of Nevada's racial and ethnic minorities, and the development of civil rights in the state. He strongly believed that knowledge and understanding of past events were critical to an accurate perception of current political and social problems, and that a familiarity with history could facilitate the finding of solutions to those problems. In 1975, he published a pioneering study of Nevada's African-American inhabitants during the decades of the Comstock mining boom. "Good Time Coming?": Black Nevadans in the Nineteenth Century is still considered, thirty years later, the definitive work on the subject.

A succession of magazine and journal articles focusing on the history of Nevada's minorities followed. A story about black rancher Ben Palmer for Nevada Magazine, articles on "Native Americans in Nevada," "Nevada Law and Race," and "The Civil Rights Movement in Nevada" for Nevada Public Affairs Review, and the article "Formation of the Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribal Council, 1934-1936" for the Journal of California and Great Basin Anthropology, were joined by such contributions to the Nevada Historical Society Quarterly as "The Organization of the Te-Moak Bands of Western Shoshone" (1982), "Formation of the Reno-Sparks Tribal Council, 1934-1939" (1987), "The Civil Rights Movement in Hawthorne" (2000), and "The Chinese Massacres of 1866" (2002).

Subjects in the wider, but related fields of general Nevada and U.S. history also attracted his attention, and led to numerous publications. Among them were the booklet The Bench Marks of . . . Character and Way of Life: The Acquisition of Rancho San Rafael Regional Park (1998), his introduction and notes to a book-length edition of A.J. Liebling's A Reporter at Large. Dateline: Pyramid Lake, Nevada (2000), an examination in Nevada Public Affairs Review of "The Truckee-Carson-Pyramid Lake Water Rights Settlement Act and Pyramid Lake" (1992), and a number of articles for the Nevada Historical Society Quarterly. These included "Alternate Visions of Reno" (1985), which was an extended review of new books about the city, and "Campaign Finance Reform in the Silver Era: A Puzzle" (1995). In 2000, the University of Nevada Press published his major work, A Fateful Time: The Background and Legislative History of the Indian Reorganization Act.

A lengthy manuscript submitted soon afterward to the university press marked Elmer's return to a concentration on the history of Nevada's minorities and civil rights development. It was a just-completed study of race and law in the state during the period 1861-1943. He had a companion volume, an examination of the development of civil rights in Nevada over the latter decades of the twentieth century, projected and substantially researched when illness interrupted his labors.

Some six years ago, Elmer donated a modest collection of personal papers to the Nevada Historical Society. This gift was followed in 2003 by another one of the research notes used in producing his book on race and law in Nevada to 1943, and then, in 2004, by yet one more gift of 25 boxes of research materials gathered in preparation for writing his history of civil rights developments in the state during the later twentieth century. In a letter accompanying this final donation, which was made just after he was diagnosed with ALS, Elmer expressed the hope that someone else might make use of the research papers to write the history that he had projected. "I spent decades gathering these materials," he wrote, "and do not want other potential researchers with similar interests to have to redo all this work."

We at the Nevada Historical Society, where Elmer had become a familiar figure in the research library, will miss his presence – and his arrivals, when he would come in full of enthusiasm for whatever new project he was working on, ready to explain, characteristically with some dry, witty asides, its importance and contemporary relevance. Fortunately, we do still have with us his published works – an important legacy he has left this state and its people. And we have the many boxes of his invaluable research notes and materials that await the attention of future historians.

Curator of Manuscripts

Nevada Historical Society Quarterly
Fall 2004

The papers are divided into three series, generally described as follows:

- I. Personal papers, chiefly materials relating to Elmer's and his family's residence in Floriston, California, in the 1960s and early 1970s. Included are copies of The Weekly Floristonian, a newspaper produced by the Rusco children, and some records of the Floriston Property Owners Association, for which Elmer Rusco once held the position of treasurer. There is also a group of research notes gathered by Rusco during the preparation of his article, "Campaign Finance Reform in the Silver Era: A Puzzle," which was published in the Nevada Historical Society Quarterly in 1995.

2 ft.

- II. Research notes relating to the Chinese in Nevada, and the development of civil rights law in the state. There is also a small amount of material pertaining to other ethnic and racial groups.

12 ft.

- III. Research notes relating to African Americans in Nevada during the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, and to the development of civil rights law in the state.

25 ft.

SERIES I

- Material relating to life in Floriston, California, during the 1960s and 1970s.
- Printed materials, photographs, and other materials relating to the history of Floriston.
- Personal journal entries by Elmer Rusco during the time he lived in Floriston.
- Records of the Floriston Property Owners Association, for which Rusco was treasurer in 1970.
- Files of research notes compiled by Rusco while preparing his article, "Campaign Finance Reform in the Silver Era: A Puzzle," which appeared in the Nevada Historical Society Quarterly, Fall and Winter, 1995.
- Issues of The Floristonian, October 1968 - April 1970. (This was a newspaper produced by the Rusco children.)
